Care Philosophy

I believe that the key to successful health care is empowering the patient. My philosophy is to provide an environment for open communication so patients can make informed decisions regarding their own health care. Patients should feel that their physician is accessible to them so they can have their questions answered.

I promote healthy living, from adolescence to menopause, through preventive care medicine and education. I teach my patients to become proactive in their health care screening so that potential illnesses can be detected early or prevented.

It is the physician's responsibility to keep up with the changes in medicine. Through my interactions with resident teaching and continuing education, I can provide my patients with the medical and surgical skills necessary to keep them healthy.

Special Interests

Preventive care medicine, infertility, minimally invasive surgery and alternatives to hysterectomy.
